HEALTH AND WELLNESS

GOOD HYGIENE IS IN YOUR HANDS

Everyone can slow the spread of COVID-19 by washing your hands frequently, covering your coughs, practicing social distancing, and staying home when you are sick. Proper hand cleaning regularly used objects and surfaces and ventilating your home or workspace. Cleaning your hands with soap and water or alcohol-based hand sanitizer can help you avoid getting sick. Soap and water should be used when hands are visibly dirty. Effective protection against coronavirus COVID-19 from hand sanitizer.

Proper hand hygiene

- cover your coughs and sneezes with your elbow or a tissue
- avoid touching your face
- clean your hands frequently with soap and water, including before and after eating and after going to the toilet
- use alcohol-based hand sanitizer
- avoid touching your eyes, nose and mouth
- clean and disinfect frequently touched surfaces such as benchtops, desks and doorknobs
- avoid sharing personal items, such as mobile phones, pens, hair ties, towels, toothbrushes and work passes
- increase the amount of fresh air available by opening windows or adjusting air conditioning

Good hand washing: A step-by-step guide

- The process should take between 40-60 seconds.
- Wet hands with water.
- Apply enough soap to cover the entirety of hand surfaces.
- Rub your palms together, ensuring soap lathers.
- Rub palm over top of opposite hand, interlacing the fingers, ensuring between each finger is clean. Then put left over right.
- Interlock fingers together with palms.
- Put the backs of fingers facing the opposing palm ensuring you're cleaning your nails also.
- Rub thumbs in circular motions.
- Rotation clockwise, ensuring the tip of each finger is cleaned in the palm of the opposite hand then on left.
- Rinse hands under cold water.
- Dry thoroughly with single-use disposable towels or dry your hands and use that towel to turn off the tap.
- If you can't access soap and water, sanitiser is the next best thing.

SOCIAL DISTANCING IN PUBLIC

Limiting face-to-face contact with others is the best way to reduce the spread of coronavirus disease 2019 COVID-19). Social distancing means keeping space between yourself and other people outside your home.

Social distancing includes:

- avoiding crowds and mass gatherings where it is hard to keep a reasonable distance from others (approx. about 1.5 metres)
- avoiding small gatherings in enclosed spaces
- keeping distance from others if you are sick, even after people
- not shaking hands, hugging or kissing
- using online services to communicate for those in aged-care facilities or hospitals, babies or people who should not be inhaled into the lungs.

Why practice social distancing?

COVID-19 spreads mainly among people who are in close contact for a prolonged period. Spread happens when an infected person coughs, sneezes, or talks, and droplets from their mouth or nose are spread to others or inhaled into the lungs. It can also spread when a person touches a surface or object that has the virus on it, then touches their face.

It may be possible that a person can get COVID-19 by touching a surface or object that has the virus on it, then touching their own mouth, nose, or eyes. But this is not thought to be the main way the virus spreads. COVID-19 can be live for hours or days on a surface, depending on the type of surface, temperature, and other factors. You are unlikely to contract with infected person touches a contaminated surface.

Although the risk of severe illness may be different for everyone, anyone can get and spread COVID-19. Older people and those with underlying medical problems like cardiovascular disease, diabetes, or chronic lung disease.

Stay connected while staying away. It is very important to stay in touch with friends and family while practicing social distance. Call, video chat, or use internet services to connect using social media. Everyone reacts differently to stressful situations and having to socially distance yourself from someone you love can be difficult.

KEEPING FIT AT HOME

Working out at home is not as easy as it sounds. But these golden rules will help you make the most of your workout. Plus, it's a great way to relieve stress.

You don't really need much gym to get fit. All you need is your body and some dumbbells. During the COVID-19 pandemic, a home workout can help you achieve all that and more.

With these 9 golden rules you can make working out at home as effective as hitting the gym.

1. Follow a schedule to stay motivated

Yes, it is very hard but also very important to stay motivated, especially when it comes to working out at home. Set a schedule and stick to it. Make sure you do not miss a day. It is the following schedule is very important: to sleep on time and wake up on time.

2. Do your stretches and settle right

Do not jump directly into the workout routine. Yes, we understand that you don't have access to a treadmill or a cross trainer, but you can always try other alternatives like on-the-spot jogging, jumping jacks, and skipping.

3. Don't forget your warm-up routine

Yes, that's important too! What if you are working out at home… you are still working out. Right? So, it is very important to do a warm-up routine. It is the best way to get the blood flow better, or at least prepare your body for the workout.

In fact, a study which was published in a journal Nutrients, says that a pre-workout meal helps in the overall metabolism and it also provides the energy needed to do more.

4. Use a yoga mat to cushion your back

Yes, it is very important. That's why we recommend you to do your Pilates or core exercises. Not on the floor, but on a yoga mat. It will cushion your back.

5. Don't stick to the basics and try new things out

Yes, you are working out at home, but that doesn't mean you need to keep trying new things out. You can always try different workouts. There are many free workouts available on Google and social media platforms and live sessions on social media - it's easier than ever to find.

6. Don't overdo or forget to exercise

Just because you are doing it at home doesn't mean that you should do it all in one go. Overdoing can lead to muscle sores and pain. Your brain will be sore as well.

7. Choose different exercise days

Yes, it is important to stick to a routine & a mundane, plus you will only be able to focus on one set of muscles. However, you don't want that right? So, to make sure that you don't overdo it, divide each day into one body part and do different exercises that deal with it.

8. Don't forget to eat and stay hydrated

Yes, you are working out at home, but that doesn't mean you can forget hydration. Music will not just keep the tempo up, but it will also help your mind relaxed and calm. And you will enjoy your workout more. Also, don't forget to eat. Eat a healthy meal before you start.

9. Don't forget to have fun

Yes, it is very important. Enjoy the saying things around the house like Dad 2 a fine bottle of wine. Things, those just have to be there because you commented using social media. Everyone reacts differently to stressful situations and having to socially distance yourself from someone you love can be difficult.

WORKING FROM HOME

What a time we are currently living in! Unprecedented times that will be remembered by many for years to come. Many of us have been working from home and there is a whole list of benefits to this, but there are also a few cons.

So if you're new to working from home or you've been doing it for a while, we've got here a list that will help you.

9 Tips for Working from home

1. Create a dedicated work space.

We work from our couch, our bed a lot of us have been lucky enough to have a dedicated 'office space', you will feel much more productive if you have a space that you can dedicate to an office space, designate an area of your home for. Make it as comfortable as possible.

2. Create a work environment.

This goes hand in hand with the last one but make sure your space feels like work! Play calm music, make sure you're not in the dark etc. Your brain will be more in the work mode if you need and less in "home mode." With children at home it will be difficult, but try make the most of it for the time you have.

3. Get dressed and ready for work.

Yes, you are working from home and have a morning routine before rolling out of bed and onto your computer. Try have a go at this concept, take in a bit of sunshine before starting your day.

4. Have a structured day.

This one is so important! It's so easy for you to hop on your computer at 8am and work until 5pm. Try to have a routine. If you usually go to the gym before work, you don't necessarily have to get that fancy but if you typically shower in the morning, continue the ritual! Put on something nice to wear, don't work in your pyjamas.

5. Set clear boundaries.

This one is so important! It's so easy for you to hop on your computer at 8am and work until 5pm. Try to have a routine. If you usually go to the gym before work, you don't necessarily have to get that fancy but if you typically shower in the morning, continue the ritual! Put on something nice to wear, don't work in your pyjamas.

6. Get outside.

You could struggle with this at first but it makes such a difference! Get ready as if you were going to the office. If you usually go to the gym before work, you don't necessarily have to get that fancy but if you typically shower in the morning, continue the ritual! Put on something nice to wear, don't work in your pyjamas.

7. Communicate your schedule.

If you live with a partner, roommate, or children, make sure you schedule at the beginning of the day. Let them know what time you will be working and what time you will be free to chat. Make sure you're on the same page of what your day looks like.

8. Take breaks.

Yes, you are working from home and have a morning routine before rolling out of bed and onto your computer. Try have a go at this concept, take in a bit of sunshine before starting your day.

9. Focus on work.

Yes, you are working from home, it's so easy to see all of the little messes you could be cleaning up or laundry you could be doing. Don't get distracted by these, you won't cross your mind. Keep your space as tidy as you can to keep your mind focused on work but also, save the housework for after work.

Hang in there folks! I know it's not always easy working and being at home. Finding a routine through this is the best way to make sure you're working to your full potential. Remember to communicate to your husband if he isn't working from home. Everyone is working on finding a new normal, so be patient and gentle with yourself.

SELF-ISOLATION & MENTAL HEALTH

These 5 small steps will help you ward off depression during the COVID-19 pandemic

The lockdown might be our new normal, but it's not going to be the end of mental health issues like depression, anxiety and depression.

Is the COVID-19 lockdown making you feel low?

You're not alone. Most of us are feeling the same. The COVID-19 pandemic has led to loneliness, anxiety and depression, and even depression. In fact, according to researchers at the University of Exeter, the COVID-19 pandemic has led to large scale disasters like the COVID-19 pandemic, the onset of depression is also on the rise.

So take our situation review, the stress of COVID-19 and the lockdown is accompanied by a rise in the number of people who have actually suffered from depression. Here are 5 small steps to help you ward off depression.

While we can't fix the economy or eradicate COVID-19 overnight, we can take some positive steps to ensure that we don't succumb to the effects of the lockdown. Here are 5 small steps to help you ward off depression with these tough times as a result of depression.

1. Maintain a routine.

Yes, it is very important to stay in touch with friends and family. Create a proper timetable. So, you need to wake up at the same time, sleep, and eat at the same time regularly so that your body clock doesn't go for a toss.

2. Get your backyard using at least 30 minutes of exercise.

Lockdown doesn't mean you stop working out. A little indoor exercise such as stretching and yoga will not only help you maintain your body but also help you in a good mood as well. So, it will definitely increase the level of feel-good hormones in your body.

3. Eat healthy.

An abundant amount is important. Eat fruits, vitamin C-rich foods and anything and everything that bothers you to a trained person. You must talk about the anxiety-provoking issues.

4. Have a balanced diet.

Don't overeat or not eat at all. We generally snack too much when we are at home with not much to do. Try to avoid junk food. Instead, we can go for dairy and meat. Don't forget to include seasonal fruits in your diet.

5. Avoid stimulants like coffee and smoking

Yes, it is very important to stay in touch with friends and family. Stimulants, including tea, coffee and cigarettes, can put you in a state of anxiety and depression.

6. Maintain a journal.

Journaling is a great self-aid that helps you to express yourself independently and maintain your privacy at the same time.

7. Stay away from alcohol.

Yes, it is very important to eat even more tedious in these uncertain times with no one around to help you with your chores. More so, if you are married and have children, who too are stuck at home due to the lockdown. Hence, you need time to unwind. Find some time for yourself and relax.

8. Don't sit in one place for too long

Yes, it is very important to eat even more. Keep your legs moving to avoid lifestyle diseases.
